Local doctors will not hazard a guess as to how many babies of town and township parents have been born in outside institutions during that period of time, but a rough estimate would be in the neighborhood of 100.

Under Ontario law a baby is registered in the municipality which it is born, irrespective where the parents reside. The result of this is that of 100 babies of town and township parents only 10 per cent are registered in the town or township. The other 9 percent are registered in Hamilton or some other place.

There were 15 marriages and 12 deaths in Grimsby during the seven month period.

Over 1500 People At Garden Party

Beamsville Fair Grounds Is Packed To Capacity For Junior Farmers' Affair -Present Cheque To Sanatorium.

Over 1500 people from urban and rural parts of Lincoln and adjoining Counties packed the grand stand to over-flowing last Wednesday night at the big Annual Garden Party staged by the Lincoln Juniors at the Agricultural Fair grounds at Beamsville.

A most varied and interesting program presented by professional and amateur talent from Toronto and Hamilton entertained for two and a half hours under ideal weather conditions. Special features of the programme were: Presentations of eight silver trophies by Reeve Lealie Lymburner of Caistor Township, chairman of the Agricultural committee of the County Council and the presentation of a $300 cheque to Dr. C. A. Shaver of the Niagara Peninsula Sanitorium by Miss Betty Vanderlip, secretary of the Junior Girls organization, who sold the largest number of tickets for the draw for 11 prizes the proceeds from which is being used to furnish a unit at the Sanatorium.

All together this was the most successful Annual Garden Party that the Juniors of Lincoln County have yet sponsored. A large group of Juniors had charge of a booth under the grandstand which catered to the appetites of milling hundreds of hungry and thirsty people during the intermission. The general opinion of the program presented was that it was tops and included such artists as Pat Rafferty, English Comedian of the famous Dumbell Show and Lifebuoy Follies; Doodie Kirk also of Toronto, tap and acrobatic dancer; Zannoni, magican. Bob Logan, ventriloquist. The ameteur artists from Hamilton were Geo, and Joe Gubbins, who kept the crowd in fits of laughter and Edna Lane, (1862) since 1860; 46% inches month, it was announced from Ot-

Carnival Winners

Big crowds and fair weather helped to make the Firemen's carnival one of the best ever held by the local fire laddies.

This year the proceeds from this always welcome affair will go towards the purchase of a pulmotor for the use of the department which is without a doubt the most worthy object that this organization has ever attempted.

Prize winners in the drawing contest were: Mr. Schultz of Smithville, the $50 Victory Bond; Miss Dorothy Metcalfe, the ton of coal and Dick Shafer, the blanket. Thanks, everybody.

FACTS & FANCIES Frank Fairborn, Jr.

"WINNIE" NEEDS NO HANDLE

Churchill's rejection of the Garter was as natural as was the offer to him of that high honor.

When granite has to be preserved with a coat of kalsomine, when it becomes necessary to paint the lily and to gild refined gold, we may look for a handle before the name of Britain's great Commoner.

The Prime Minister of Britain's finest hour needs no title of knighthood or heraldry. He does not, like other men, need an "Hon.", a "Mr." or even a Christian name to distinguish his identity. His greatness is sufficiently labelled by the one name Churchhill by which he will be known to history as surely as he is so known by those who have been cheered by his puckish smile and his "V" sign in days when the national horizon was dark.

CHURCHILL A SECOND PITT

"I think it's just terrible the way the people of the Old Country have treated Mr. Churchill, after all he's done for them!"

That was the comment of an elderly Scotch woman in Toronto on the result of the general election in Britain. The majority of Canadian people probably felt the same way about it, writes Lewis Milligan. On this continent, and throughout the British Commonwealth, Churchill has been regarded as the savior of his people and the greatest national leader and world statesman that Britain has produced since the days of William Pitt, Earl of Chatham.

In many respects Mr. Churchill closely resembles William Pitt who was a great statesman and orator, and who at a critical period drove the weakling Walpole from power and took over the premiership. It was said of Pitt that he "had an eye to the greatness and glory of England, summoned the English nation to look to its laurels; saw the French, the rivals of England, beaten back in the four quarters of the globe; driven at length from power himself, he still maintained a single regard for the honor of his country, and the last time his voice was heard in the Parliament of England was in protest against her degradation by an ignoble alliance with savages in the war with America. On this occasion he fell back in a faint into the arms of his friends around, and he died a little more than a month later."

Writing of William Pitt, Carlyle said: "For four years he was king of England; never again he; never again one resembling him, nor indeed ever can be." That was a great tribute from a rugged Scotsman to a typical Englishman; but Carlyle was a pessimistic prophet. Winston Churchill is a second Pitt; the resemblance is striking. For five years Churchill has been the virtual king of England. He also had an eye to the greatness and glory of England, and he summoned the British nation to look to its laurels and rallied the peoples of the Empire to the defence of the Motherland. In those five years he saw the enemies of Britain beaten back in all quarters of the globe, and he, too, has now been driven from power by the little politicians who sheltered in his shadow in the hour of national peril.

At the time of writing Mr. Churchill has not yet expressed himself on the result of the election. He is a keen student of history, and he is probably viewing the situation in which he finds himself in its historical perspective. He was never a successful politican in time of peace. He was too impetuous for one thing, but his lack of success was due chiefly to his larger vision of British politics and the vital importance of maintaining Britain's position as a great world power. He saw, as anyone of broader vision can see, that Britain's greatness, and indeed the very life of the people, depended solely upon her influential position in international affairs.

Social and economic reforms are important, and they have always had a prominent place in British politics, but if Britain should ever come under the control of narrow-minded socialists who would try to establish a little self-contained Utopia in that island, then Britain would be finally reduced to the minor position of Denmark or of Sweden.

But Britain has not gone Socialist, Onehalf of the popular vote in this election went to the old line democratic parties, and a large proportion of th other half probably represented a reaction against the existing government which has always followed in the wake of war. The new Labor Government could not set up a Socialist State in Britain with at least half of the people opposed to such a revolutionary change. Mr. Churchill will see to that, and his voice may yet be heard in summoning the people of Britain to preserve the "greatness and glory of England" for which they have fought and endured so much in these last years of war.

SAME NEED HERE

The Boston Globe says that what that country needs is a non-skid coin, guaranteed not to slip through the fingers.

We have pretty much the same need in this country. For the past four or five years, war industry has provided an abundance of work for all at top wages. In the retail business, price is not a feature. Their shelves are pretty bare and the retailer can sell anything he can buy. Farm prices are high and the market is unlimited and prices are ris-

Everyone seems to have money, and everyone seems to be hunting for ways to spend it. It is only a few short years since we were trying to get enough to live on during the great depression, but memory seems to be a fickle thing. Most people have forgotten the depression.

There are some, of course, who have not forgotten, and some who will never be able to forget those days. These are saving their money today, but by and large the average Canadian will never profit from boom times until he gets a species of nonskid coins that can't slip through his fingers, and that goes for the female of the species

FORGOTTEN WORDS IN STYLE AGAIN

A lot of fine old-fashioned words and phrases have all but disappeared from the vocabulary of Canadian people at a distinct loss to us all.

Such words as "frugal . . . scrimp . . . thrifty . . . cheese-paring . . . making both ends meet . . . to deny oneself . . . husband your resources"

In the early days of Canada the going was tough. Pioneers had almost daily need for words like these. They learned, first hand, the hard lessons of thrift, making do, doing without, making a little go a long way.

Getting a toehold in a new world was hard but they won out and proud are the men or women of today who can trace their names back to these hard working pioneers.

Today, we are braving another new world. We are not called upon to fight redskins and wild animals but a more subtle foe -hunger. The hunger of millions of people we never saw in our lives. The hunger of children, and the patient old.

Before us now is the gigantic task of feeding these people who, without our food, will perish from the earth just as surely as if a gun had mowed them down.

Because of this, Canadians are going to learn to use again such words as "thrift" and "being frugal" and "making a little go a long way." We are being asked to accept shortages of food that would have seemed fantastic a few years ago.

Two meatless days a week, both at home and in all public eating places and less meat on the other five, are no hardships when we realize that the Atlantic Charter won't mean much to a woman who watches her baby slowly starve to death. The Four Freedoms won't register on a man's heart if his stomach is empty; the San Francisco Conference won't be much of a comfort to him if his little family is cold and hungry.

A man's first instinct is to survive. He can't unless he is fed.

A starving man is a pretty ugly customer to meet. Multiply him by 250 million and you get a faint picture of Europe right now.

These are the responsibilities of our Western world, whether we like it or not. You can't reason with hunger . . . its need is too urgent.

The individual consumer meat ration will be approximately two pounds per week. This will include all fresh and processed meats. This ration-or sharing-of meat will be another way of winning the peace.

Make our "hands-across-the-sea" not an empty hand.

WAY BACK WHEN Frank Fairborn, Jr.

WHO KNOWS? Hamilton, Aug. 6th, 1945.

Mr. Orlon Livingston.

This week I submit the following paragraphs under the heading, who knows?

What year, did bandmaster Hyde, who resided on Murray street north, conduct the citizens' band in the Village?

During the days of the old Grand Trunk station, what parcel of property was owned by the late John VanDyke family, when they conducted the famous carriage works for the manufacture of phaetons, gigs, drays, buggies, cutters and sleighs, during the horse and buggy days in the Village?

What year was the old wooden bridge on Main street over the famous Forty Creek replaced by concrete?

During the board walk era, and about the time of the McClure fire, there was a barber shop on Depot street-where, and who was the barber?

Who can recall, when old Tom and Charlie, the faithful steeds, were always alert to respond to a fire under Chief Mabey?

Prior to the late Jim Perry, who owned the blacksmith shop on the south side of Main Street adjoining the Fitch property, and opposite the Forbes' driveway? With others to follow including the Webster stone car route in detail. I remain,

Francis Hill.

TAISS MABEL BURKHOLDER of Hamilton has IVI written the following very interesting story about the effect of the Niagara escarpment on the development of central and southwestern Ontario, a chapter on the geology of the district which will give a new fascination to country hikes hereabouts:

Many people living in this district who proudly call the rocky ridge to the south the "Mountain" do not know very much about it beside its name and have only a faint idea of the part it has played in developing southern Ontario and determining where the centres of population were to be. It has done much more than provide the beautiful scenery of which we like to boast.

This peculiar formation of rock, running across Ontario from Queenston to Georgian bay, is known as the Niagara escarpment. At Hamilton it is the. Mountain and back of Collingwood, in the county of Grey, it is the Blue Ridge. Whatever the name, it accounts for some of the most striking scenery in southern Ontario. Briefly tracing the course of the cuesta across Ontario we find that it enters the province from New York state, at Queenston. It is specially marked at the following places, Grimsby, Hamilton, Dundas, Georgetown, Belfountain, Orangeville, parts of Grey county and up the Bruce peninsula to Cabot Head, after which it reappears on Manitoulin island, where it finally loses itself among the rocks.

Very few of us seem to have bothered to find out what became of our mountain after it broke up into smaller hills behind Waterdown, but does not the scenery repeat itself in the Blue Ridge of Grey county, where streams leaping over the escarpment create such beauty spots as Eugenia falls on the Beaver river, Inglis falls on the Sydenham and Walter's falls on the Bighead.

The lower rocks of this formation are sandstones and shales, but with the deepening seas of the middle Silurian period these gave place to heavy dolomites, which were again followed by shales in the closing stages of the period. A broad belt, twenty miles wide, lying alongside of the cuesta all the way to Lake Huron is called Guelph Lolomite, on which are situated the city of Guelph and the town of Fergus, both noted for scenic beauty. To the heavy dolomites we owe the preservation of the present shape and position of Niagara Falls and the fact that it is being worn back with comparative

The cuesta sharply divides Ontario into two parts, the comparatively flat upland of the southwestern portion and the eastern lowlands. It furnishes the height of land from which all our local rivers have taken their courses.

The escarpment from Queenston to Dundas boasts about twenty-four waterfalls of surpassing beauty. Some of the more noted are as follows: Decew falls, with its enchanting Power Glea, long used for the development of electricity; Ball's falls, named after a pioneer family who operated mills and a store at the summit during the War of 1812. It is situated at the point where the Twenty-Mile creek takes its leap over the ridge. The historic "Twenty"

JUST A PROMISE

During the election in the Province of Saskatchewan a year ago, which swept the C.C.F. party into power in that Province, the people were promised a new heaven and a new earth.

Instead of that, they are getting the same old taxes, with quite a few new ones added on for good measure. One of the promises of Premier Douglas was that the very unpopular educational tax on meals in restaurants and other purchases, would be removed.

But although two sessions of the Legislature have been held, the tax is still there. And on top of that, new taxes have been imposed-a cent a gallon more on gasoline, a higher tax on farm trucks, a stumpage tax and royalty on all finished lumber from Saskatchewan forests, and a license tax on all Promises are great things at election times, but it takes responsibility to bring out the fact that a country cannot be financed by wind.

When things are done through fear they always lack strength.

An expert is a man who has previously made the mistakes.

American tourists thick as been,

Hydro Commissioner D. E. Anderson hasn't a broken arm. It was the handle on the paint brush that broke.

Traffic Officer "Bubs" House helping the lady storekeepers let down their store awnings. Courtesy never cost a dime.

Zimmerman's Fruit Ranch trucks hauling plenty of tomato boxes. Must look like a good crop. That's what the old corncob pipe does.

Main Street listening, and enjoying, that effervescent, spontaneous laugh of T. Rienza Hunter. Peaches or no peaches he still laughs.

"Peach King" Phil. Tregunno striding down street. It's a long cry from the vegetable patches of Bartonville. But the old piano sounds the same.

"Dutch" Shantz having coffee and toast in Rushton's with Ye Ed, and bemoaning the fact that he missed the Labour Party idea. English elections the cause of that.

was a sizable stream, regarded as a river by the early settlers. Boats came in off the lake as far as the foot of the mountain to be loaded with produce from the many mills which were operated farther inland. In this way the "Twenty" had much to do in determining where early settlements and villages were to be located.

Next in order comes Beamer's falls, Grimsby, or the Forty-Mile creek, and the very lovely Stoney Creek falls, with its Devil's Punch Bowl, where the rocks have been scooped out in circular fashion by the swirling of prehistoric waters. This formation repeats itself in Albion falls a few miles to the west Directly south of the city of Hamilton we have th Buttermilk falls, the Washboard, Chedoke and Tiffany, followed by Ancaster falls. On the other side of Dundas gorge we come to Webster's, falls, one of the loveliest of all, an entrancing sight in the spring, when the streams are running full between flowerdecked banks. Wherever there were waterfalls there were mills in the early days. So the cascades of the escarpment played their part in meeting the needs of the settlers. Around the mills grew up villages, some of which are the towns as we know them to-day.

At Dundas the escarpment has been cut through by the action of a prehistoric river which swept down the valley. But the great gap only added enshautment to the scenery. Dundas valley has always been famed for its beauty. Professor Grant says in Picturesque Canada: "Her greatest asset is her glorious scenery, which involuntarily brings every tourist to his feet as the train sweeps along the mountain terrace." Dr. Grant also takes a little thrust at our term-'the Mountain"-observing that the "rather ambitious name may be allowed as long as we are in Ontario, on the principal that among the blind the one-eyed man is king." People who negotiated the steep roads in the horse-and-buggy days thought it was rightly spoken of as a mountain. It seemed a long haul to the top!

Around the head of the lake the escarpment rises to a height of 380 feet above the level of the lake or 625 feet above sea level.

From here the rocky ridge takes a sharp turn northward, making a lot of pretty scenery around Milton, Georgetown and Acton. Especially fine are the views before arrival at Orangeville. We are now in the Caledon hills, which boast such beauty spots as Belfountain and the Forks of the Credit. Here we stand on the highest land of central Ontario. It was believed by the pioneers to be especially healthfull, free from the fever and ague caused by bad air arising from the swamps. Dr. Thomas Rolph, of Ancaster, in his book published 1836, says, "Caledon stands much elevated, in some parts mountainousis extremely healthy and a most desirable location for an industrious person with small means." Here again the ridge determined the trend of settlement.

From Owen Sound the ridge bends to the northwest to form the backbone of the Bruce peninsula. It disappears under the water at Cabot Head, comes up again on Manitoulin Island, then loses itself among the rocks.

The escarpment has played a part not only in determining the location of settlements but in the direction of roads linking them. The first railroads sometimes showed a disinclination to negotiate the ridges. We recall an early story of Owen Sound, then called Sydenham. It founder believed that it would develop into a great entrepot of commerce between Ontario and the grain-shipping west. It was to be a second Chicago. So convinced of this were its inhabitants in 1850 that they felt that any railroad leading north out of Toronto would have to come to them as the only practicable northern terminus. So they refused to vote assistance to one or the other of two companies that proposed to build from Toronto to Georgian bay. The result was that one company folded up and the other the Northern Railway Company, chose Collingwood as a terminus, because it was a more accessible route and avoided the difficulty of climbing the ridges of the escarpment. Once more our "mountain" had spoken and determined the trend of settlement. Sydenham could not live on beauty alone and for a time all its ambitions were dashed to the ground.

Horses Toothache

just as human beings do, but the horse as a rule has to suffer without being able to get relief.

The trouble is, say veterinary authorities, that the average horse owner does not know the symptoms. Here are a few of them: the horse may eat more slowly than usual, leave part of his meal uneaten, slobber into the feed box, jerk his head from the trough when starting to drink, or make more than the usual objection of brid-

Do we want a short house or a tall house?

Tomahawk

Stop! Leave those tresses lie! According to Marcus Tashnet, president of the New Jersey Assn. of Master Hairdressers, the new topknot hair style is going to scalp the American woman as bald as brass doorknob. Pulling the hair tightly upward into a knot over an old-fashioned rat will cause weakening and eventual disintegration of the hair by rotting, he claims. The symptoms are gruesome. You won't notice anything for a while. Then the lock line will begin gra- fats dually to recede, creeping slowly upward from the base of the neck. One morning it will all be no more than a memory, and you'll have to begin wearing that eyebrow pencil a good six inches higher. That's what he says. No, no, we're anchoring ours with fish sinkers.

Meanwhile, on her rounds of the movie palaces, she sees more sheets than a chambermaid at a de luxe hotel.

In between shows Miss Blevins writes hundreds of letters to film players yearly. She keeps scrap books of their pictures, their romances and their scraps. She has 14 scrap books devoted to Deanna Durbin alone. What started her on her hobby is not explained, but it all began some years ago. We wonder if it originated in a love of art or a fondness for crockery. Still, after a bookkeeper has wrestled with ordinary figures all day, doubtless Betty Grable's appearance comes as a welcome relief, to mention but one.

The Old Home Latch

(This Poem written by a Smithville boy overseas, was fliched from the Smithville Review)

At the bend of a road in Smithville With the glow of the hill around There's a bit of a whitewashed cabin Set snug on its plot of ground; A lilac blooms by the doorway, And swallows build in the thatch; And 'tis many a time I'm longing To be lifting that old home latch.

Sometime I shall leave the city, Where the best of men soon dies, And seek for the tender pity That broods in my Native skies; And be it spring or summer, Or be it joy or pain, I'll be glad with a mighty gladness When I'm lifting that latch again.

For what is the city luring. The calling of street or mart, When a wind from the hills of Smithville Is blowing across your heart! And where can you find contentment In a world of striving men, When a white cap mother of Smithville Is praying you home again?

Sure, many a time, and often, Where the Rockies loomed to the sky. I've dreamed of her saying her Rosary, As the breezes of the night went by, And I know that the Lord who heard her Was setting my homeward track For the sake of a mother in Smithville, Who wanted her gossoon back.

And so for the wearying toiling Of many an ill-starred road, I will go where the hills of Smithville Are blowing their peace abroad. For over the seas I'm seeing A sugaan chair by the fire, At home in my father's country, The land of my heart's desire.

When the lilac tree is in blossom, And the hedges are green again, I will go to my mother in Smithville, From a world of toiling men; And I know that the tears will blind me. And the sob of my soul will catch The breath from my lips when I'm hearing The click of the old home latch.

Keep the Apples on the Trees

O Parmone prevents pre-harvest drop-keeps the fruit on the trees-allows it to develop, ripen, colour. It lengthens the picking season-important in these days of labour shortage. One 4 oz. bottle of PARMONE Concentrate makes 100 gallons of spray. The effect is noticeable within a day or two of application. One application is usually sufficient. Order PARMONE from your local C-I-L Dealer. Spray on first signs of pre-harvest dropping.

With a small town publisher it is either a feast or a famine-one week buried with news, overloaded with advertisements - next week news is as scarce as Peaches in Iceland and there "just ain't no advs."

This is one of those weeks. Half of Grimsby is away in the North Country and the other half wish they were. The Editor and his staff wish they were somewhere away from this "famine" that has hit-but the paper must come out, so for good or bad, you have it.

We are not taking a "shut down" holiday this year, because to do so would cause a lot of inconvenience to our job printing clientele and in this day of scarce commodities they must be protected.

A large trailer truck, attempting to go through a railroad underpass near El Reno, Okla., almost made it-but not quite. With grinding crash the truck was wedged tightly between the pavement and the steel girders overhead. Soon traffic was stalled for blocks on both sides of the underpass.

Experts from the State Highway Department tugged and hauled to no avail. When an acetylene torch was suggested to burn a little steel off the girders, railroad officials objected. Talk of dismantling the truck drew a prompt veto from the driver.

Are Back Again

We are glad to see that we have 25 cent pipes back with us again.

We thought they had disappeared, but Monday when we were can ght off our home base without pipe we were able to go into a tobacco store and buy a quarter pipe.

We paid a dollar for it. Before evening all the pretty varnish had burned off it.

This will also be recalled as an era when a merchant kept his best lines hidden under the counter.

The manner in which some men shake hands is enough to give you the shakes.

To protect Ontario's 100 million acres of forest lands, the Provincial Air Service has 27 aeroplanes, 1,000 forest rangers, 248 motor boats and 220 steel lookout towers.

Every one of us can help to prevent forest fires by exercising care and caution while in the woods.
